

Charles Ng has been with UL for 20 years, focusing on the development of chemical testing programs for a wide variety of consumer products including toys, textiles, footwear and food contact materials.

He is responsible for the standardization and coordination of chemical testing in Asia Pacific Region, and is also the corresponding technical lead. Charles works with manufacturers in China to help them understand the international regulations, standards and various chemical initiatives, and frequently conducts technical seminars for international clients as well as local suppliers.

His current focuses are chemical management and sustainability solutions in the industry.